Narrative Report:

The Monthly Study Habit is a regular academic activity of MENDORO conducted every Tuesday and Thursday from 8:00 PM to 9:00 PM at the Dining Hall and Lobby of the BSU Men's Dormitory. All residents gathered for a communal one-hour self-study session. MENDORO Officers and Sentinels monitored attendance and maintained a quiet and conducive study environment during the session. The activity was designed to cultivate a consistent study routine and improve residents' academic performance through structured, community-based studying.

Accomplishments / Outcomes:

The Monthly Study Habit activity fostered a consistent study routine among dormitory residents. The communal study environment contributed to improved focus and discipline. Residents reported better time management and more structured academic habits as a result of the regular sessions. Attendance was consistently high, reflecting strong resident participation and commitment. The activity successfully promoted academic excellence and a shared sense of responsibility for each other's academic progress.

Problems encountered:

Some residents experienced difficulty concentrating during sessions due to occasional noise from adjacent areas of the dormitory. There were also instances where residents arrived late or missed sessions due to extended class hours or group project meetings. A few residents cited fatigue as a factor affecting their engagement during the evening study sessions.

Recommendations to problems encountered:

It is recommended that stricter noise control measures be enforced during study hours, including designated quiet zones. A brief check-in at the start of each session can help track attendance and build accountability. Flexibility for residents with heavy academic loads during midterms and finals should also be considered, with make-up sessions or alternative arrangements provided.
